NICOLAS LAINÉ

BSB'12

MSc Wine Management's graduate
Export Manager, Wine Tourism & Events
Manager - Château de Meursault

Among the three existing programmes on the French market, only the MSc Wine Management really met my expectations: a training totally in English to acquire technical and business vocabulary, an imperative in an environment where most of the transactions are done at an international level; cultural and professional diversity in our class, a real strong asset because there is an undeniable cultural component in the tasting of a wine, which generates rich and very formative exchanges to understand the specificities of different markets.

I like the wine-making approach which is deeply rooted in the Burgundy terroir. It is a region that fascinates me: it produces some of the best wines in the world, from only two grape varieties, Pinot and Chardonnay. All this in a rather small geographical space, and yet it brings out an incredible mosaic of wines. I am touched by the humility of these winemakers who have a real sensitivity.”

CÉCILE DUCROT-LOCHARD

BSB'97

Master in Management's graduate

I have been committed for years to show that luxury and sustainable development are compatible. I spent five years at HSBC dealing with socially responsible investments. One day, I brought Lafarge in, which had a brand new partnership with WWF. It was a trigger for me: I told myself that this kind of association needed profiles like mine to develop, and I made a spontaneous application and that was the beginning of my journey with non-profit organisations. First in charge of corporate partnerships, I became Director of Philanthropy and responsible for the "Luxury & Environment" programmes. I decided to leave WWF to devote myself to writing, and Luxury and Sustainable Development, the new Alliance came out in 2011. At the same time, I set up a consulting firm, Citizen Luxury. Today, I am still at the head of this firm, and I have also just joined LVMH as Communications Director of the new cosmetics house born in early 2016, Cha Ling, incubated by Guerlain. I am delighted to join an initiative that blends luxury and sustainable development and dares to communicate on the subject.”
